

Advice on tack & equipment security

Tack and Equipment Security

Saddles, tack and rugs are regularly stolen so they must be clearly identifiable. A visible mark will be a deterrent to thieves and any stolen items that are recovered can be returned to you. Even if it is recovered, unidentifiable property is either returned to the thief, auctioned or destroyed. Your home postcode is always the most recognisable mark to use.

Tack marking usually involves stamping leather saddles on the nearside, under the flap

For synthetic saddles the near side stirrup bar is engraved.

Horsewatch offer tack marking whereby we can visit your field/yard on a designated day and stamp your saddles and other pieces of tack.

To arrange a 'Tack Marking Day' please email us at:
HorseWatch@westmercia.pnn.police.uk

A Guide to Marking Your Rugs

Why bother?

Marking your rugs will help prevent their theft, help safe guard your horse and if they are lost can stop their resale. It will also enable someone to return them to you should they be found. Even though you think it is just an old summer sheet or turnout, if it's stolen your loss is the price of a replacement which can easily be hundreds of pounds.

Advice on tack & equipment security

Multiply this by all the rugs you keep at the yard and a theft can be a very expensive event to cope with.

The majority of rug theft occurs during autumn and early winter when the weather becomes colder. Some people see your rug as a quick solution to their cold horse, especially if you have just bought a nice new one. Others see the ready market in used rugs as a quick profit at your expense. Either way you can come back to a cold wet animal only to find your insurance does not cover rugs.

For information on the best ways to mark your rugs, click HERE

Why bother?

Marking your rugs will help prevent their theft, help safe guard your horse and if they are lost can stop their resale. It will also enable someone to return them to you should they be found. Even though you think it is just an old summer sheet or turnout, if it's stolen your loss is the price of a replacement which can easily be hundreds of pounds. Multiply this by all the rugs you keep at the yard and a theft can be a very expensive event to cope with. The majority of rug theft occurs during autumn and early winter when the weather becomes colder.

Some people see your rug as a quick solution to their cold horse, especially if you have just bought a nice new one. Others see the ready market in used rugs as a quick profit at your expense. Either way you can come back to a cold wet animal only to find your insurance does not cover rugs.

Advice on tack & equipment security

How to mark them

There are several ways to mark your rugs depending on the material they are made from. For light coloured indoor fabrics a black permanent marker pen is a quick solution.

Turnouts and thick quilted rugs can have your home postcode painted on. A neat way for marking by hand is to draw around a stencil with a ball point pen and just fill in the letters afterwards.

Iron-on lettering can be made from T shirt transfer sheets sold in stationers. Use the dark material type so you can match or contrast the rug colour. A good bright colour combination will make the postcode easy to see even when the rug is muddy. You can also add a freezemark to show the horse is protected that way.

Be sure to test that the rug will stand the hot iron needed to seal the transfer to the material, follow the maker's instructions carefully and only print with an inkjet (a laser printer will melt the transfer). Three postcodes will fit across an A4 sheet using PowerPoint or Word to set them out in your colours.

BUY A WMHW PATCH FOR £1